Colonial Williamsburg golf is some of the best in the country. The three courses at the Golden Horseshoe Golf Club are set in a Certified Audubon Cooperative Sanctuary. The classic Gold Course, designed by Robert Trent Jones Sr. more than 50 years ago and still one of the country's highest ranked resort courses, is steps away from the Spa. The adjacent Green Course was designed by his son Rees Jones 25 years ago, making this the first father-son combo in the country. Jones senior also designed the Spotswood Course, a popular executive-length layout perfect for families, new golfers or just loosening up.

Revenue from golf play on the Golden Horseshoe Golf Club's three public courses supports The Colonial Williamsburg Foundation, keeping this vital piece of American history alive and thriving.
