

GLACIER CLUB DIRECTOR OF INSTRUCTION ALEX FISHER NAMED TO LIST OF BEST YOUNG TEACHERS IN AMERICA

DURANGO, COLO. (Feb. 5, 2015) – Being honored year after year never gets old for Alex Fisher, the Glacier Club's director of instruction, who for the fourth straight time has been named to the list of “Best Young Teachers in America” by Golf Digest magazine.

“It is an honor that I would never take for granted at any age,” said Fisher, 37, who has been included on the list since 2012 (when Golf Digest still used the original name of “Top 40 Teachers Under 40”). “I have been very fortunate to pass on my knowledge of the game through teaching and coaching.”

Fisher teams with Glacier Club head professional Luke Brosterhous to comprise one of the most prestigious instructional duos in Colorado. Brosterhous, who holds a master’s degree in sports psychology, is an accomplished author and twice has been named the Western Colorado PGA Teacher of the Year.

“Alex is passionate about golf and has the ability to pass that passion on to his students,” said Brosterhous, a Class A member of the PGA of America. “He is very encouraging to golfers of all ages, with the patience to motivate anyone to learn the game.”

From Nottingham, England, Fisher grew up a soccer fan and has played golf since age nine. When fellow Brit Nick Faldo won both the Masters and British Open in 1990, Fisher’s focus became golf. He went on to graduate from De Montford University and then completed the Professional Golf Management Program in Lincolnshire, England.

Fisher is a member of the PGA of America, having recently attained the prestigious classification as PGA Certified Professional, which only 2 percent of the PGA's 27,000 members have achieved.

A featured instructor in Golf Digest magazine, pgatour.com and Arizona Golfer Magazine, Fisher also has contributed instructional columns for both the Las Vegas Review Journal and Arizona Republic, as well as making appearances on golf radio shows in Las Vegas.

"There is no one way to play this game," Fisher believes. "As an instructor, it is my objective to simplify the game of golf and make it more fun."

Fisher is also active in community work, supporting a variety of organizations through golf programs and events.

This winter Fisher is completing his sixth season at the Wildfire Golf Club in Phoenix, where he is living with his wife Mary and their two children before they return to Durango. Previously, he was the Regional Academy Manager for Golf Digest School, and the Director of Instruction at TPC in Las Vegas, Nevada.

More information about Glacier Club is available by calling 888-382-7888, or 970-382-6700, as well at www.theglacierclub.com

#

About Glacier Club

The Glacier Club community is an exclusive mountain sanctuary that combines real mountains, real people and real value, united in a thriving residential and member partnership. As the only private golf community just outside the historic and colorful town of Durango, Colorado, The Glacier club caters to all ages with amenities and activities throughout the seasons. Situated in the majestic San Juan Mountains, each resident's backyard is 1,000 acres of gated serenity surrounded by nearly 3 million acres of National Forest, offering some of the most unique and extraordinary residential property in the entire country. Membership in the Glacier Club includes access to a network of premier golf clubs throughout the United States via ClubCorp. Learn more about this very special golf community, memberships, amenities and lifestyle at (866) 521-8575 or info@theglacierclub.com

Media Contacts:

Karen Moraghan
Hunter Public Relations-East
(908) 963-6013
kmoraghan@hunter-pr.com

Ed Vyeda
Hunter Public Relations-West
(831) 375-1747
evyeda@hunter-pr.com